Opening Remarks

Hello, I’m (host representative and title) of (hosting organization). We are pleased to bring you this DVD about the Executive Branch of our national government, headed by the President, from the White House.

It is important that you know this information because in our democracy it is we, the people, who determine what steps our country takes. It is we, the people, who decide who makes the decisions from the White House and the Congress. Each one of our votes is important. In the presidential election of November 2000, if just 269 voters in Florida switched their votes, the outcome would have been different. That number is less than one out of one million Americans.

Some Americans say that they don’t vote because they don’t know enough about our country. You can help keep our democracy strong at this difficult moment in our country’s history by helping others understand better the information you will see in this DVD.

We hope you enjoy it.

Closing Remarks

We hope you now better understand the executive branch of your federal government. And, we hope that you will also become more involved in our country’s government. Vote at each opportunity. Share your ideas and opinions with your elected officials. Remember that “democracy is based upon the conviction that there are extraordinary possibilities in ordinary people.”
